CURRENT TOPICS.

THE MEETING of the International Law Association at Glasgow this week under the presidency of Lord ALVERSTONE is note-worthy for the important declaration it has produced on the subject of international arbitration. The Lord Chief Justice spoke in terms of high praise of the draft treaty of arbitration between this country and the United States which unfortunately failed to win the adhesion of the latter country in 1897. It remains to be seen whether the treaty can be put forward again and with what result. The main object of the discussion at the conference was to advocate the negotiation of a treaty on similar lines between Great Britain and France. It may be impracticable to hope that such a treaty could cover all possible sources of dispute. The occupation of Egypt was a subject suggested by Mr. Gray Hill as beyond the scope of arbitration, and a French speaker instanced the case of Alsace-Lorraine as a matter which neither France nor Germany would submit to the arbitration of another state. subject of international arbitration. The Lord Chief Justice nor Germany would submit to the arbitration of another state. Exclusions of this kind may in the present state of feeling be necessary if any progress is to be made, but in all ordinary matters it should be possible to refer disputes between nations to arbitration in a systematic way. According to the resolution passed by the conference, that body expressed its satisfaction at the attempts made to widen the scope of arbitration between states, its regret at the failure of the British-American scheme, and its approval of a Franco-British treaty on similar lines. The conference also discussed and adopted a new set of marine insurance rules to be known as the Glasgow Marine Insurance Rules of 1901.

THE RECENTLY-PUBLISHED Judicial Statistics for 1899 show, as might be expected, how heavily the new work arising under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, has told upon the Court of Appeal. In 1897 the final and interlocutory appeals entered numbered 670. In 1898 the figure had risen to 767, and in 1899 to 826, or an increase of more than 25 per cent. on the average of the previous four years. Of the 826 appeals entered, those under the Workmen's Compensation Act were 140. This increase in business, without at the same time any arrangement for additional facilities for dealing with the business, accounts largely for the state of arrears into which the court has sunk. According to the introduction prefixed to the statistics by Master MacDonell, the work in the Chancery Division for 1899 presented no special features. There was a slight decline in the number of proceedings begun—7,677 as compared with 7,999 in 1898, and also in the matters heard— 889 as compared with 921.

In the King's Bench Division the number of writs -68,114—shewed a decline from the 70,967 issued in 1898; but Master MACDONELL adds that in 1900 there was an increase in the writs in the Central Office—43,784 as against 41,440 in 1899. A feature to which he calls attention is that the introduction of the summons for directions has not, apparently, greatly reduced the number of interlocutory applications. The proportion of summonses to every 100 writs issued was approximately 62 and 60 for the years 1899 and 1898, during which the new system was in force, and 67 and 65 for the two previous years. There is, of course, an enormous disproportion between the number of writs issued and the number of actions heard. The number of actions personal in 1899 in London and Middlesey and on circuit was entered in 1899 in London and Middlesex and on circuit was 4,151 as against 4,229 for 1898, but of the 4,151 only 2,704 were tried or disposed of in court. Actual trial also is responsible for but a small part of the total amount of nearly seven million pounds recovered in the division. Only £190,775 was recovered after trial by jury, and £352,688 after trial without jury. A third of the entire sum, or £2,313,758, was recovered under order 14. As between trial by judge or by jury the numbers remain pretty even. Of the number of actions tried (2,704), those in which a jury was dispensed with were 1,182, or 43.71 per cent. For the years 1895-99 the corresponding average was 48.44 per cent. We deal elsewhere with the statistics relating to county courts.

Master Macdonell gives in his introduction to the Civil Judicial Statistics a table of towns where little or no civil assize business is done. The following are enumerated as towns where no actions were entered or tried in 1899—Brecon, Mold, Oakham, and Welshpool and Newtown. A list of twenty-five assize towns is given where five cases or under were entered or tried, and in the following sixteen towns (including alternative towns) there has been no year during the last six years in which more than five cases have been entered and tried—Appleby, Aylesbury, Beaumaris, Bedford, Brecon, Devizes and Salisbury, Dolgelly, Hertford, Huntingdon, Mold, Oakham, Presteign, Reading, Ruthin, Warwick, and Welshpool and Newtown. Lists of this kind are eloquent in favour of a redistribution of assize towns, so as to confine the visits of judges to places where the business really warrants the expenditure both of money and of time.

The case of Darlow v. Singleton, which came before a Divisional Court recently, is interesting in regard to the borough courts which have existed in England for centuries. It was an application for a rule calling on the Master of the Crown office to shew cause why a mandamus should not issue to him to enter an appeal from the Court of Pleas of Preston, By section 45 of the Judicature Act, 1873, appeals from an inferior court which might before have been brought to a court whose jurisdiction is by the Act transferred to the High Court of Justice are to be heard by Divisional Courts, and the appellant had to make out that an appeal could have been brought before the passing of the Act. It appeared that by an Order in Council of September, 1854, the provisions of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, were applied to the Preston court. The Common Law Procedure Act contained no provisions as to appeals except as regards error. Section 35 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, gave an appeal in cases of motions for a new trial, but this section had not been applied by Order in Council to the Preston court. The Divisional Court, therefore (Kennedy, and Darling, JJ.), refused the rule, holding that no right of appeal existed before the Judicature Act, and pointing out that section 102 of the Judicature Act, and pointing out that section 102 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, expressly provided for appeals in the case of the Court of Common Pleas at Lancaster and the Court of Common Pleas at Durham, so that in the absence of any such statutory provision no right of appeal could be inferred. Mr. Justice Darling is reported to have said that, now that attention had been directed to the subject, the law might be amended by the Legislature. But the Legislature seems to be very reluctant to deal with borough

These tribunals are discussed in the first report of the commissioners to enquire into the Municipal Corporations of England and Wales. It is there stated that in a large majority of the boroughs of England and Wales there are local civil courts with a jurisdiction co-extensive with the limits of the borough. These in general have their origin in particular charters, but occasionally (as was the case with the court at Preston) they exist by prescription. In general they have cognizance of all personal actions, and the amount for which such actions can be brought is often unlimited. So much has been said of the convenience to suitors of having justice dispensed within easy distance of their place of residence, that it seems at first sight strange that these courts (with the exception of the Mayor's Court of London, the Liverpool Passage Court, the Salford Hundred Court, and possibly the Bristol Tolzey Court) should have fallen into disuse. But we find that most of these courts were subject to disadvantages. The judge was usually the mayor, who had no professional knowledge, and, living in the place, was often suspected of partiality. A judgment obtained in the court could not be enforced outside the borough, and the defendant was able to escape liability by removing himself and his goods out of the jurisdiction of the court. The costs of proceedings were often excessive, and the rules of procedure were without the improvements that had been introduced into the practice of the Superior Courts. Some of these defects have been removed by statute. The judge is now either the Recorder or a barrister of seven years' standing. The judgment may be enforced throughout Great Britain and Ireland, through other courts having jurisdiction, where the person or property of the defendant is found. By the Statute Law Revision and Civil Procedure Act, 1883, s. 8, the Crown may from time to time by Order in Council extend to any court of civil jurisdiction any of the provisions of the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873, and the Acts amending it or of the Rules of Court made thereunder, with such modifications as may be necessary or desirable. Several applications were made by boroughs for an Order in Council enabling them to adopt the Judicature Rules, and we believe that about seven years ago a committee was appointed to report as to the principle upon which the rules of borough courts of record should be framed, and also to settle a model code so as to establish as far as might be uniformity of practice. This committee probably made its report, but we understand that no application under the section has been entertained even in the case of the Court of Passage of Liverpool, where a large business is transacted. This would seem to shew that there is no great probability of the Government promoting any legislation in the direction suggested by Mr. Justice DARLING.

A GOOD DEAL of discussion has from time to time arisen over the provision of 7 Geo. 3, c. 37, by which certain lands reclaimed from the Thames were to be "free from all taxes and assessments whatsoever." It has, of course, not been doubted that the words freed the lands from all taxes and assessments whatsoever. then existing, but questions have arisen where these have been re-imposed by subsequent legislation, and also where new taxes and rates have been imposed. Upon the former point it has been decided that the exemption still applies where old taxes are re-imposed by later statutes (Williams v. Pritchard, 2 T. R. 2; R. v. London Gas Co., 8 B. & C. 54), but upon the latter it seems that in respect of new taxes there was no exemption: Perchard v. Heywood (8 T. R. 468). The two former cases related to land tax and poor rate, the last to house and window duties. The question has arisen again in Sion College v. Major of London (49 W. R. 361), where the Court of Appeal have affirmed the judgment of the Divisional Court, refusing exemption, but on different grounds. The case related to a consolidated rate levied under the City of London Sewers Act, 1848, and the Elementary Education Act, 1870, and, so far as it was levied under the former Act the Divisional Court held that it was practically the same as the rate for cleansing, &c., which had been levied for many years previously. The Act of 1848, however, levied the rate on all occupiers, whether liable to poor rate, or not so liable by reason of the premises "being situate in any precinct or extra-parochial place or otherwise, and the Divisional Court held that these last words were sufficient to exclude the old statutory exemption. In the Court of Appeal this latter point has not been decided, as the rate levied under the Act of 1848, being levied under new conditions and circumstances, was considered to be a new rate, and therefore not within the exemption of rates existing at the date of 7 Geo. 3, c. 37. The decision restricts, though it is far from abolishing, a rating anomaly for which there seems to be no rational justification at the present day.

The next sessions at the Central Criminal Court will begin on Tuesday, the 10th of September, when it is expected there will be a very heavy calendar of prisoners for trial, including several charges of murder. Mt. Justice Bucknill will be the presiding judge.

SOME COUNTY COURT STATISTICS.

The end of a legal year affords a good opportunity for retrospect, and, thanks to the report recently issued under the editorship of Master John Macdonell, C.B., with regard to the Civil Judicial Statistics for 1899, ample material is afforded for this purpose. Without, however, attempting to give a detailed analysis of this interesting and able document, which well repays careful perusal and study, it may be useful and instructive briefly to consider that portion of it which concerns litigation in the county courts. The statistics collected on this subject are very suggestive, and fully bear out the view, often previously expressed in these columns, as to the undoubted popularity of these courts, which, since their establishment in 1846 by Act of Parliament, have gradually lost their original character as mere small debts courts, and have become civil tribunals of first instance with a largely increased concurrent jurisdiction with the High Court over ordinary causes and matters, and possessing also an important and sometimes exclusive original jurisdiction under various special statutes unnecessary to mention here.

Though the plaints actually issued in the county courts in the year under consideration (1899), amounting to no less a total than 1,152,163, were slightly fewer than in the previous year, they were considerably in excess of the figures for the years 1894-1898; while the cases determined on hearing exceeded the number reached in any previous year and amounted to 414,956, the plaintiffs moreover obtaining judgments for a total amount above that recovered in any former year with the exception of 1894. As regards the costs allowed in 1899, the amount is above the average of the last few years, while the total fees were the largest received in any year except 1894. The number of debtors imprisoned varies but little, it would seem, from year to year, the figures for 1899—namely, 7,867—being much the same as those in 1898 and in the years 1895-1899. The equity jurisdiction of the county courts is not often invoked, and the number of cases in 1899 is less than in any previous year since 1896. This is probably due, in no small measure, to the fact that the machinery provided by the County Courts Act and Rules for the transaction of business in chambers is not so perfect and suitable to equity proceedings as that available in the Chancery Division of the High Court.

Turning to the jurisdiction under special statutes, we notice, from the report under consideration, that in the year 1899 there were 1,347 arbitrations in the county courts under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, and 763 memoranda registered, and 505 cases under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880. In this connection it is worthy of notice that out of 999 cases under the former Act the defendants succeeded in 246 cases, or in about one-fourth of them; while, on the other hand, out of 246 cases under the latter statute the defendant succeeded in 91 cases—i.s., in three-eighths. Taking another special statute—namely, the Tithe Act, 1891—we find that in 1899 there were 2,534 applications made under that Act to the county courts, as against 2,513 in 1898, the annual average, however, from 1895-1899 being as large as 3,185. Without referring to statistics under other special statutes, we may mention incidentally that bankruptcy jurisdiction is possessed by 146 county courts, while 45 (including the City of London Court) exercise admiralty

With regard to actions and interpleader proceedings remitted to the county courts from the High Court, they numbered 1,618 in 1899, as against 1,674 in 1898, but considerably exceeded the annual average for the years 1895-1899. In conclusion, it may not be without interest to our readers to record that the grand total of population comprised in all the fifty-nine county court circuits and the City of London Court exceeds twenty-nine millions.

The third day's sitting of the International Law Association in Glasgow on Thursday was devoted to papers and discussion dealing with the international law of marriage, the execution of foreign judgments, evidence by foreign witnesses, and pauper litigants. Mr. Justice Phillimore submitted the chief paper on marriage laws; the report of the committee on the execution of foreign judgments was brought up by Mr. J. Alderson Foote, K.C.; and Mr. John P. Coldstream read extracts from a paper on the expediency of uniformity in the procedure of courts of civilized countries with regard to pauper litigants.

SURRENDER OF SHARES.

In the recent case of Bellerby v. Rowland and Marwood's Steamship Co. (Limited) (1901, 2 Ch. 265) an ingenious attempt was made to profit by the well-known rule that a purchase by a company of its own shares is ultra vires, but though the rule was held to be applicable to a surrender of shares involving the release of the member from liability for uncalled capital, Kekewich, J., under the special circumstances declined to admit this as a ground for granting the relief asked for. The defendant company was incorporated in 1890 with a capital of £275,000 divided into 25,000 shares of £11 each. By the articles of association it was provided that the directors might accept from any member a surrender of shares on such terms and conditions as should be agreed. In 1893 the company sustained a loss of over £4,000 in connection with a new steamship for the building of which it had contracted, and the directors, five in number, agreed to bear this loss between themselves. With this object it was arranged that each should surrender eighty-three of his shares. The shares were then paid up to the extent of £10, there being thus an outstanding liability of £1. The transaction was confirmed by resolutions of the board, and the certificates for the shares surrendered were cancelled. A deed-poll was also executed by the directors declaring that the shares had been surrendered with the object of making good to the company the loss sustained in connection with the steamship in question, but expressly disclaiming any liability in respect of the loss on the part of the directors. Subsequently the business of the company became prosperous, and at general meetings held in 1899 and 1900 the view was expressed that the shares formerly surrendered by the directors should be restored to them. A means of doing this seemed to be available in the fact that the surrendere was really a purchase by the company of its own shares, and therefore ultra vires; and that in consequence the register ought to be rectified by restoring the names of the

To what extent a surrender of shares to a company can ever be supported is a question by no means free from difficulty, and Kekewich, J., forbore to discuss it. In Re Dronfield Silkstone Co. (17 Ch. D. 76, p. 94,) Cotton, L.J., assumed the validity of surrender generally, and made it a ground for supporting also a purchase by a company of its own shares. It was argued, he pointed out, that such a purchase was invalid as being a reduction of the capital of the company, and he observed: "If this transaction is to be held invalid on that ground I do not see how a surrender or forfeiture of shares is ever to be supported." But the reasoning, as was subsequently shewn by Trevor v. Whitworth (36 W. R. 145, 12 App. Cas. 409), begins at the wrong end. It is sufficiently obvious that a purchase by a company of its own shares for cash is a return to the shareholders of that amount of the capital of the company, and until the shares are re-issued the paid up capital is correspondingly diminished. The result of such a transaction in Trevor v. Whitworth was that in the winding up of the company a former shareholder was competing with the creditors to recover the unpaid balance of the purchase-money. In effect, that is, he was claiming a return of capital pari passe with the payment of the company's debts. It is not surprising that the House of Lords held such a transaction to be invalid and were content to leave the case of a surrender of shares to take care of itself. Lord Herschell, however, expressed his opinion that the decision did not really affect forfeiture and surrender. Forfeiture of shares, he pointed out, is recognized by the Companies Acts, and moreover it does not involve any payment by the company. At the outside it only exonerates from future liability those who have shewn themselves unable to contribute what is due from them to the capital of the company. There is no return of paid-up capital, though there is a reduction of the amount which has been subscribed. It is the same with a surrender which is made to avoid a forfeiture. Where a company is in a position to forfeit shares, the effect is identical if it accepts a surrender. And Lord Herschell did not exclude other possible cases of legitimate surrender, quoting the words of Jessel, M.R., in Re Dronfield, &c., Co.: "It is not for me to say what the limits of surrender are which are allowable under the Act, because each case as it arises must be decided upon its own merits."

What, then, is to be said in a case like Bellerby v. Rowland, &c., Stamship Co. (supra) where, though no cash passes, a solvent shareholder surrenders shares in respect of which there is a liability for uncalled capital and so frees himself from this liability. There is here no return to the shareholder of any part of the paid-up capital of the company, and the transaction is not open therefore to the obvious objection which is fatal to an ordinary purchase by a company of its own shares. There is, however, an actual decrease in the resources to which the creditors of the company may have to look, and judged by this test the transaction violates the principles of the Companies Acts. Creditors lose nothing if a company accepts a surrender of shares from an insolvent shareholder so as to avoid the necessity of forfeiture. But the abandonment of the right to call up capital from a solvent shareholder stands upon a different footing, and a transaction involving such an abandonment cannot but be regarded as prejudicial to creditors. Technically, moreover, the surrender, being in consideration of a release of liability, operates as a purchase of shares in the company so as to bring the case within the decision of Trevor v. Whitworth. KEREWICH, J., held, accordingly, that the surrender in the present case was bad notwithstanding that, prior to Trovor v. Whitworth, a surrender of shares on which there was a liability for calls had been supported in Snell's case (L. R. 5 Ch. 22). The power of the court to rectify the register by restoring omitted names under section 35 of the Companies Act, 1862, can, however, be exercised only where the court is "satisfied of the justice of the case," and in the circumstances before him Kekewich, J., held that there was no consideration of justice which required him to restore the directors to a consideration which held here. position which had been voluntarily abandoned so many years before. In the words of the learned judge, there was no equity to disturb the existing state of things, and the action accordingly failed.

CASES OF THE WEEK.

Before the Vacation Judge. PHILLIPS v. GODFREY. 21st August.

LANDLORD AND TENANT—RETAINER OF POSSESSION OF PREMISES CONTRARY TO Undertaking—Motion to Restrain—Form of Order—Ecclesiastical Law—Notice to Quit by Vicar to Assistant Curate—Pluralities Act. 1838 (1 & 2 Vict. c. 106), ss. 95 AND 96.

Law—Notice to Quit by Vicar to Assistant Curate—Pluralities Act, 1838 (1 & 2 Vict. c. 106), ss. 95 and 96.

This was a motion upon behalf of the Rev. John Edward Phillips, of the Vicarage, Hucknall Torkard, Nottingham, the plaintiff, for an order for an injunction to restrain the defendant, the Rev. John Talbot Godfrey, from remaining in occupation or possession of St. John's Parsonage, in the said parish of Hucknall Torkard, and from interfering with or disturbing the plaintiff in his occupation or possession of the said parsonage. In support of the motion it was said that the plaintiff was the vicar of the parish of Hucknall Torkard, Nottingham, and had been vicar of the parish for twenty-two years and upwards. On or about the 10th of December, 1898, he engaged the defendant as an assistant curate of his parish, and placed him in charge of St. John's Church, which was one of the mission churches or chapels of ease in the parish, at a salary and with the use and occupation of the parsonage house attached to the church for the residence of the curate there, he paying the rates and taxes and doing all repairs. On or about the 6th of February, 1901, with the written consent of the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Southwell, the bishop of the diocese, he gave the defendant six months' notice to terminate the curacy, and such notice expired on the 6th of August last. Subsequently to his giving the notice—namely, on the 15th of April last—the defendant commenced an action against him for libel and slander, and in the same action he (the plaintiff) counterclaimed in respect of a libel contained in a letter of the defendant to one of the plaintiff's churchwardens. The action came on for hearing at the Nottingham Assises on the 18th and 19th of July last, when it was settled upon the following terms, namely: "Record withdrawn. Plaintiff undertakes to leave his house on the 6th of August heart." The undertaking was endorsed on the brief of leading counsel. On or about the 25th of July last, notwithstanding the undertaking withdrawn. Plaintiff undertakes to leave his house on the 6th of August next." The undertaking was endorsed on the brief of leading counsel. On or about the 25th of July last, notwithstanding the undertaking given in court in the action, the plaintiff received a letter from the defendant stating that he had written to the bishop that he did not accept his notice of the 6th of February. The defendant was still in possession of the parsonage house, his wife being in occupation of it. There was authority in support of the order asked for being granted on motion—Collison v. Warren (1901, 1 Ch. 314). The notice to quit was given under the Pluralities Act, 1838 (1 & 2 Vict. c. 106), ss. 95 and 96. By section 95: "And be it enacted that every curate shall quit and give up the cure of any benefice, which shall become vacant, upon having six weeks' notice from the spiritual person admitted, collated, instituted, or licensed to such benefice provided such notice shall be given within six months from the time of such admission, collation, institution, or licence; and that in all other cases it shall be lawful for the incumbent of any benefice whether resident or non-resident thereon, having first obtained the months from the time of such admission, collation, institution, or licence; and that in all other cases it shall be lawful for the incumbent of any benefice whether resident or non-resident thereon, having first obtained the permission of the bishop of the diocese, to be signified by writing under his hand, to require any one or more of his curates, who after the passing of this Act shall be licensed to any curacy, to quit and give up his curacy upon six months' notice thereof given to the curate, who shall thereupon quit the same according to such notice, provided always that any incumbent resident on his benefice, or not resident but desiring to such permission as aforesaid by the bishop, appeal to the archbishop of the province, who shall either confirm such refusal or grant such permission as to him may seem just and proper." By section 96: "And be it enacted, that every curate who shall reside in the house of residence of any benefice which shall become vacant shall peaceably deliver up possession thereof, with the appurtenances, upon having six weeks' notice from the spiritual person admitted, collated, instituted, or licensed to such benefice, provided such notice be given within six months from the time of such admission, collation, institution, or licence; and that in all other cases it shall be lawful for the incumbent of any benefice, with the permission signified in writing under the hand of the bishop of the dicesse, or for such bishop, at any time, upon six months' notice in writing, to direct any curate to deliver up the house of residence, and such portion of the glebe land as shall have been assigned to such curate, and such curate shall thereupon peaceably deliver up the possession of the premises pursuant to such notice; and if any curate shall refuse to deliver up such premises pursuant to such notice; and if any curate shall refuse to deliver up such premises pursuant to such notice; and if any curate shall refuse to deliver up such premises pursuant to such notice; and if any curate shall spiritual person holding the benefice the sum of forty shillings for every day of wrongful possession after the service of such notice." The defendant did not appear either in person or by counsel.

JONGS, J., said that he felt a difficulty about granting an injunction restraining the defendant from remaining in possession, but he would grant an injunction restraining the defendant, his servants and agents, from interfering with the plaintiff's or any of his nominees' or curates' occupation and possession of the parsonage until trial or further order. Injunction accordingly.—Counsel, Removell Davis, K.O. (G. G. Solomon with him). Solicitos, Murr & Rusby, for Ranson & Hutton, Nottingham, CASES OF LAST SITTINGS. High Court-King's Bench Division.

PEARES & CO. (Appellants) v. KNIGHT (Respondent). SAN (Appellants) v. VAN TROMP (Respondent). Div. Court. 9th Aug. SAME

ADULTERATION—FOOD AND DRUGS—ARTICLE NOT OF THE NATURE, SUBSTANCE, AND QUALITY DEMANDED BY THE PURCHASER—BUTTER, ADDING MILK TO—SALE OF FOOD AND DRUGS ACT, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 63), s. 6.

These two cases were heard together. The first was a case stated by the stipendiary magistrate for the Staffordshire Potteries District, on an information preferred by W. H. Knight, the respondent, against Pearks & Co., the appellants, under section 6 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, charging that the appellants did sell to the prejudice of one C. Gifford, the purchaser, butter which was not of the nature, substance, and quality demanded by the purchaser, and upon which hearing the magistrate convicted the appellants. The facts as stated shewed that the appellants were grocers carrying on business, amongst other places, at Fenton, in the county of Stafford. The Ine lacts as stated shewed that the appellants were grocers carrying on business, amongst other places, at Fenton, in the county of Stafford. The respondent was an inspector under the Sale of Food and Drugs Acts. On the 20th of March, 1901, the respondent caused to be purchased by one C. Gifford at the appellants' shop one half-pound of butter for the purpose of analysis, the price of which butter was 5d. The butter was divided that the appellant of the butter was divided. into three parts, one of which was sent to the public analyst. All the requirements relating to the purchase of an article for analysis were duly complied with. The analyst stated that the butter contained 22.53 per cent. complied with. The analyst stated that the butter contained 22°53 per cent. of water and that this was at least 6 per cent. too much. Water is a natural constituent of butter and is always present to a considerable though varying extent. Butter is made from milk or cream, or both. Milk contains about 88 per cent., cream about 50 per cent. of water. There is no statutory standard for the composition of butter as regards the proportion of water, the Board of Agriculture having made no regulations as to this under section 4 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1899. The standard taken by the analyst in this case was 16 per cent. The 6 per cent. excess was not the result of the manufacture of the butter, but was caused by the addition to the butter already manufactured of extraneous milk, which had been incorporated with the said butter by some process subsequent to the manufacture thereof. This added milk was not required for the production of the butter, but was incorporated therewith for the purpose of increasing its weight by means of the extra water thereby introduced.

It was stated that it is not unusual for a butter manufacturer to blend two or three different kinds of butter. No evidence was called by the spellants, but it was contended on their behalf that an article could not be adulterated by the addition of a constituent from which it was derived, and therefore that the butter in question was not in fact adulterated whatever the percentage of water might be, and there being no legal standard as to the quantity of water in butter the fact that the butter contained 29:53 per cent. of water was no evidence of adulteration, and that no offence had been committed under section 6 of the Act of 1875 by not eliminating a natural constituent of the article. The magistrate was of opinion that there was an excess of 6 per cent. of water, which was caused by the addition of the milk, and he held that the process of adding the milk being for the purpose of the addition of water constituted an offence under section 6 of the Act of 1875 in that an article was sold not of the nature, substance, and quality demanded by the purchaser, the same being adulterated by water.

PEARES & Co. (APPELLANTS) v. VAN TROMP (RESPONDENT).

Peares & Co. (Appellants) v. Van Tromp (Respondent).

This case was stated by the stipendiary magistrate for South Staffordahire, and was in many respects very similar to the above case. The appellants were the same as in the previous case and carried on business at Brierley Hill, in the county of Stafford, and the respondent was an inspector under the Sale of Food and Drugs Act. On the 1st of April, 1901, the respondent caused to be purchased by one Guilbert, at the appellants' shop, half-a-pound of butter for the purpose of analysis. The butter was labelled "Pure Dairy Butter," and was wrapped in a paper on which were the words "Pure Butter," the butter so purchased was divided into three parts and one was sent to the public analyst. All the requirements of the statutes in that behalf were complied with. The analyst certified that the butter contained 21:75 per cent. of water and that this was at least 5 per cent. too much. The butter in this case had been blended and was composed of different kinds of butter mixed together, genuine full cream milk being added to it during the process, and the excessive amount of water found in the butter was excessive amount of water found in the butter was excessive, and, as it was caused by adding milk to an already manufactured article, the mixture could not be properly called butter, but was butter adulterated by the addition of water in the form of milk, and that the said milk was added fraudulently and with the intent to increase the bulk of the mixture, and he was further of opinion that the fact that the Board of Agriculture had not exercised the powers conferred upon it by section 4 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1899, did not warrant the appellants in mixing milk with the butter and so producing an abnormal amount of water in the mixture, and he therefore convicted the appellants of the offence charged in the information. The questions in both cases were whether, upon the facts as stated, the magistrates respectively were right in low in convicting the appellan

GENERAL.

Speaking of the projected removal of the Westminster County Court from St. Martin's-lane, the Daily News says that the personnel, so far as the chief officials of the Westminster County Court are concerned, has the chief officials of the Westminster County Court are concerned, has seen but few changes since it came into existence in 1847. The first judge was Dennis Creagh Moylan, who only lived to enjoy his dignity for two years. He was succeeded by Judge Francis Bayley, a relative of Mr. Justice Bayley, whose severe sentences are carcely yet forgotten. Judge Bayley presided at the Westminster Court for forty-four years, and died in 1893, when Judge Lumley Smith, who still remains, was appointed. The first registrar of the court was Mr. Christopher Couft, who died in 1870, and was succeeded by Mr. Christopher Robert Cuff, now the senior registrar, who, since 1893, has had his cousin, Mr. Charles Ernest Cuff, as joint registrar. The cashier of the court, Mr. H. S. Bell, has over fifty years' service. years' service.

A terrible accident, unfortunately attended with a fatal result, occurred to Mr. Harry Cavendish, the Chief Clerk at Bow-street, on Monday. Mr. Cavendish arrived at the court as usual early that morning, and left about half-past ten with the intention of going into the City and afterwards to the Home Office. While crossing Farringdon-street he was knocked down and run over by a lorry laden with about eight tons of stone. Death was instantaneous, and the body was at once removed to St. Bartholomew's Hospital. At the inquest held on Wednesday a verdict of accidental death was returned. Mr. Cavendish, says the Daily News, was fifty-six years of age. He was appointed third clerk at Bow-street in April, 1864 and in July of the same year was removed to Greenwich. He remained years of age. He was appointed third clerk at Bow-street in April, 1864, and in July of the same year was removed to Greenwich. He remained there until November, 1877, when he was appointed Chief Clerk at Clerkenwell. In December, 1895, he returned to Bow-street as Chief Clerk, where he remained to the day of his death. At the sitting of the court on Tuesday very sympathetic reference to the decessed gentlema and his services was made by Mr. de Rutzen, the presiding magnistrate, and by Mr. Harry Wilson on behalf of the solicitors practising at the court.
